Collapsing the Fraud -- April 15th is a National Holiday

By Anna Von Reitz

Collapsing the Fraud -- April 15th is a National Holiday

If someone stole your identity, would you have any trouble reporting it to the bank and whoever else was impacted by the swindle? Would it take more than a nanosecond for you to object to paying someone else's bills? Accepting the blame for someone else's crimes?

Well, come on, now, that is what has happened here.

The criminals in Congress swindled your grandparents and parents, stole our national identity, grabbed our credit cards, set up millions of phony escrow ACCOUNTS benefiting themselves and have spent their ill-gotten gains and time in the District of Columbia cobbling up another gigantic swindle they are attempting to unleash on you and your kids right now.

It's time to wake up and pull the plug on this.

How?

For starters, if you aren't a federal civilian or military employee, an elected officer of a federal corporation, a voluntary franchise operator of a federal corporation, an African American, a federal welfare recipient, or a federal political asylum seeker--- if you are Joe Average American working in the private sector, a farmer, an unincorporated business owner, etc.,---you can revoke your election to pay Federal Income Taxes.

April 15 can be a holiday. Imagine that?

That's what it has been for me, since 1998. I have a party. We drink cheap champagne. We recite bad poetry. We hurl Shakespearean insults--- "Thou burly, flap-jowled, goatish, howling miscreant! How darest Thou imply a bottomery debt!"

Get started. There is no time like now.

You write an old-fashioned letter to the Commissioners of the IRS and the Internal Revenue Service and you simply tell them that you are eligible for exemption and are revoking your election to pay Federal Income Taxes. Please adjust your records accordingly and honor my exemption.

Send the revocation letter via US Certified Mail, Return Receipt Requested.

Keep a copy of the letters and the mailing receipts. That's it.

If anyone from the IRS or Internal Revenue Service asks about your tax status or sends you anything in the mail insinuating that you owe them money or have to file any reports, send copies of your copies of the revocation letter and mailing receipts. Certifiy that the copies are true, complete, and correct, sign and date. Stuff it in the mail, U.S. Certified, Return Receipt Requested---- and down their tubes.

If anyone calls you "Mr." or "Mrs." or "Miss" from now on, inform them that you are not a Warrant Officer in the Merchant Marines (that is, a Withholding Agent) and you will happily object if anyone presumes that you are.

You may have to give your employer a written and notarized Waiver absolving them of any responsibility to withhold federal taxes from your paycheck. You might have to fill out a W8 BEN for that purpose.

My point is that millions upon millions of innocent Americans can avoid paying a third or more of their earnings (which are private property, not corporate income) as a "gift and estate tax" that they don't owe, in support of an organization that has practiced fraud, usurpation, kidnapping, press-ganging, theft, inland piracy, copyright and trademark infringement and conspiracy to murder against them.

Send those letters effective with October 1, 2015 (or on that date up to ten years prior) and keep your credit at home where it belongs.

Then, kick back. Inform your friendly local banker that you have retired from all federal service and your PERSONAL bank account is in fact a private bank account and all funds deposited in or transferred from that account are private funds that must be denominated as lawful money. Send that U.S. Certified Return Receipt Requested, too. Every time they try to foist off some new agreement, resend the same information.

This keeps them and the IRS from presuming that the digits in your account are Federal Reserve Notes and that in turn prevents them from confiscating your money, issuing bogus liens against it, and otherwise seeking to defraud you.

Once your revoke your "election" to pay, you can never file federal income taxes again. By law. So nobody, including Junior Woodchuck IRS Agents, can accuse you of having any such obligation or of failing to file or any of that clap-trap again.

It's a lovely feeling to know the truth and know who you are and how to stuff corks in the mouths of those who have been extorting money out of you.

It's downright glorious to tell an IRS Agent, "Who gave you permission to even speak to me?"

Ah, yes, sweet freedom.

It's what our people have fought and died for, for generations. It's what you deserve and what you have been denied.

So, why wait another ten seconds?

Join me. On April 15th this year, take off your manacles and chains. Stretch your bent back. Take a deep, deep breath.... and begin a whole new and different relationship with the IRS.

From now on, they don't collect from you. They collect for you.

Go forth, America, and conquer.

See this article and over 500 others on Anna's website here:www.annavonreitz.com To support this work look for the PayPal button on this website.